Research methods in management
Abstract

This discipline introduces the main economic and management optimization models used in industries or enterprises management, the allocation of resources, and the choice of the best development option.

The course is aimed at expanding knowledge of modern optimization methods in management and forecasting models in order to develop skills for the practical application in making science-based managerial decisions. Software is widely used (particularly MS Excel) for problem solving exercises.