

Discipline: Comparative Management

Annotation

Labor intensity: 4 ECTS, 144 academic hours.

Final control form: exam

Educational-methodical complex (TMC) in the discipline "Comparative management" - is a set of educational and methodological materials that contribute to effective mastering by students of this discipline. It is designed to provide essential assistance in the study and systematization of knowledge in the field of management, to study, analysis and comparison of national management models of different countries. This complex will receive individual tasks of students, helping to deepen knowledge in this area and exercise self-control.

The development and use of teaching materials in the educational process are aimed at solving the following main tasks:

- determination of the place and role of this academic discipline in the main educational program;
- reflection in the content of the discipline of modern achievements of science, related to this academic discipline;
- description of the multimedia components of this discipline, each of which should represent a complex of logically related structured didactic units represented in digital form;
- presentation of logical chains of communication of this discipline with others disciplines of the educational program;
- rational distribution of study time by sections of the course and types training sessions, distribution of training material for training modules;
- distribution of teaching material between classroom sessions and independent work of students;
- planning and organization of independent work of students, taking into account rational use of time allotted for independent work;
- determination of the range of sources, educational, methodological and scientific literature, ways to search for the necessary information in computer networks, necessary for mastering the discipline, and the formation of a bibliographic list;
- development of an optimal system of current and final control of knowledge students.