

Discipline: Jurisprudence

Annotation

Labor intensity: 2 ECTS, 72 academic hours.

Final control form: test.

Summary. At the present stage of human development, it is difficult to imagine the world in its organic existence without legal regulation, in which whatever the area. The modern man and the citizen of the state are bound by diverse ties to family, work, government and the environment.

Public life, in addition to the principles of self-regulation and in the name of its development needs constant regulation by norms that best absorb elements of morality, justice, religion and the consistent manifestation of human interests. Free creativity, personal self-realization and a prosperous life are possible only in harmony of human rights, freedoms and obligations, based on the principal respect for human dignity and the freedoms of others.

Modern higher education, in addition to specific professional knowledge and skills, aimed at educating a worthy and full-fledged member of society, responsible for his present and thereby creating the future.

High legal culture and solid legal awareness are the values to which we strive at the Russian-Armenian University, in the Republic of Armenia and the Russian Federation.

The program contains both general theoretical knowledge about state and legal phenomena, as well as knowledge based on the latest regulatory legal acts on a number of leading branches of Russian (Armenian) law. Relationship with other disciplines. This discipline is interconnected with such legal disciplines as "Theory of State and Law".