

Discipline: Practical tasks and methods of making management decisions

Annotation

Labor intensity: 2 ECTS, 72 academic hours.

Final control form: test

This program is designed in accordance with the requirements for the preparation of bachelor's degrees in direction "Management". In the course "Practical tasks and methods of making management decisions", the modeling of real management decisions is considered. situations to develop optimal strategies when making decisions.

Particular attention is paid to classical decision-making methods and practical models for analyzing performance indicators of organizations.

Relationship with other disciplines:

This course is based on the methods of processing financial and economic information and optimization models allow you to identify quantitative indicators of qualitative dependencies for the purpose of making economically sound management decisions.

Goals and objectives of the discipline

Goals and objectives of the discipline. The course is aimed at expanding knowledge of modern analytical and optimization methods and models in management with the aim the formation of skills for their practical application in the adoption of scientific informed management decisions.